"Dyslexia for a Day" Workshops

April 13, 2013, 1:00-3:00, UMaine Memorial Union, Rm 151 (RSVP limited spaces)

Project DEBUNK was created to give Maine families, teachers and schools a place to go for current, truthful information about what dyslexia is, to debunk the myths still surrounding what dyslexia is not, and to support dyslexics through education, understanding and tutoring. We are beginning this journey by providing a "Dyslexia for a Day" workshop that simulates the processing difficulties a dyslexic experiences daily. We also will direct participants to updated resources to become better educated in the truths of dyslexia.

This 2 hour simulation of dyslexia, (created by Dyslexia Training Institute) is for anyone wanting to learn more about what dyslexia is like and what students might go through in a classroom on a daily basis. This simulation is for anyone, including family members (extended family too), friends, teachers, tutors, speech therapist, physicians and more. Anyone who wants to be a support to individuals with dyslexia will benefit from this experience. YOU could be the ONE person who changes the path of a dyslexic child by simply understanding what they go through. Consider giving up 2 hours of time to experience it yourself.

What people say about this program simulation:

"I think this experience has given me a whole new level of understanding of what my son experiences every day." Parent

"I feel like all teachers should experience something like this because it really does put you in the spot of someone who has dyslexia. It can really be an eye-opener."
Elementary teacher

"I am a Special Ed teacher. I work closely with students that have dyslexia. Every simulation we did today is completely right on."

"I have been truly enlightened and I have to admit that it has been one of the best classes I have ever taken." Special Ed Teacher
